1	Lucy Johns	Thank you. You can hear me. Thank you all. I want to go back to slide number 10. Referring to the discussion by that gentleman from wherever he was, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, about sending notifications by zip code. I find this makes my teeth chatter as an urban resident. The idea that I experience an event and providers all around my zip code, of which there are many, would be notified of this -- they've never heard of me, they're never going to hear of me, and I just cannot fathom that this would be secure or acceptable to consumers. In an urban environment, I cannot comment, comment for rural California but this technology, as I understood it by the presenter, really does reflect realities in rural America. And that may have application in California. But for an awful lot of consumers here, it doesn't have any. Any meaning and I hope that DxF will never land on this even as a recommendation, not to mention mandate. Thank you.
